KINDS OF NONFICTION

Created by author Melissa Stewart, the 5 Kinds of Nonfiction classification system helps librarians expand and balance their nonfiction collection to provide a broad array of titles that appeal to different types of readers.

It also helps students select books they like, predict the type of information they will find in a book, and use the books for specific purposes.

To assist librarians in identifying titles from each category, Lerner used the 5 Kinds of Nonfiction system to classify the nonfiction on our website. Browse collections at lernerbooks.com/5KNF. Some books may contain elements from two different categories; these are blended nonfiction titles.

Note that books that deliver factual information but use fictional elements, such as invented dialog or scenes, talking animals or fictional characters—are not included in this classification system. They are referred to as “informational fiction” instead.
